DeathgodPeople who pick one brand of car over another solely on the brand name are retarded.

Well, I can see that you haven't been driving long or you can't drive yet.

I have owned 3 Fords (1979, 1984 and 1989), 1 Chevy and 1 Pontiac.

The 3 Fords didn't even last a year each and none reached 125,000 miles.

The Chevy 1 ton (1973), I bought with over 100,000 miles and sold it with over 200,000 (only replacing the transmission once). That truck is still running today.

The Pontiac (1995), I bought because I have a family. It had 90,000 when I bought it. It now has over 160,000 miles on it. Only requiring a radiator to be replaced at about 140,000 miles (Due to some punck ass kid with a BB gun. Over 20 holes shot in to it).

So I pick my vehicles from what I have experienced.

(I have owned other cars for fun)
