Well, I downloaded and used F-prot, it got some stuff, and looking through what is was scanning, I think I found where all the broswer hijackers are. But the real problem with my computer is proving to be much harder -

Cybersitter 2002.

I feel such intense shame at having a netnanny running on my computer and not being able to remove it myself... But then I thought, "Wait, people on Renegadeforums.com know everything!" So, I come to you with a quandary. How do I remove Cybersitter 2002 from my computer?

I've tried everything there, and it doesn't work. I've deleted the Net98 folder and C2K in the registry key, cut C2K from the run list in msconfig, but it ALWAYS appears on startup, no matter what I do. My guess is that it piggybacks a run script or something on another program, some Windows thing, I would guess, but I don't know what it is.

If anyone could help me purge this, I would be much obliged.
