Subject: Re: FireOx | Opera
Posted by Blazer on Tue, 28 Jun 2005 04:53:07 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Firefox has a popup blocker builtin...the Adblocker extension is different in that it lets you block selected images and/or iframes from sites, so they just do appear at all.

You can optionally toggle a setting that stops any flash on the site, unless you click and allow it.

You can block specific adds and frames, or entire sites/domains like clickthrough.com etc.

Here is a quick example of http://www.slashdot.org:

Before

After, removing the ads iframe

And here is before and after when reading a story:
Before

After

Once you block the iframe, the ads stay gone forever (unless you remove the filter)...it's quite nice