You don't have to know or speculate, it's just common sense that terrorists with inadequate weaponry wouldn't want to stick around to see themselves get smeared across the street by U.S. military strength. However, your claims about the Iraqi's blowing themselves up is completely unfounded. Why would they want to commit suicide after we finally established a civilized and working government and infrastructure?

It's really not that difficult for the normal man to understand, yet you fail to because you try to hard to be smart.

And stop trying to derail the current topic at hand. We're talking about where the terrorists are coming from, not the treatment of detainees and prisoners.

AND if you're so hellbent on proving me wrong, where is your proof that the Iraqi's are killing themselves?
