Subject: Re: My computer is in a comma.
Posted by icedog90 on Wed, 28 Dec 2005 19:49:54 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

A lot of people everywhere tend to think "drivers drivers drivers!" when I've almost never seen any history of problems being fixed by updating/rolling back the drivers in a situation like this. If it doesn't even boot all the way, it's a lot smaller of a chance that it could be the drivers. "Professionals" usually don't know anything, but they know how to deal with problems that occur often. Contacting the manufacture is a different thing, but I'm talking about technicians at local stores or other places. If you think I'm wrong, then it's you who's below one of those people. Whenever I hear them talk to a customer it just makes me mad because a lot of times they don't even know what they're talking about. There are some out there that aren't stupid like that, but there are too many that are. Yes, they may be able to solve problems a lot better than me, but that's because they deal with the same ones all the time so they know what to do right away.