Not only is it iluminecant, it can change how the key's look during different applications. Eg: You want a standard keyboard that looks and feels good this is you're best bet. You want a keyboard that iluminates you're area, this is you're best bet. You want a keyboard that makes playing games easy, this is you're best bet.

you can program each key to display something different when an application is run. Each key is its own, individual display that can display anything you want it to.

This isnt out yet but will be at the end of the year hopefully.
