Subject: Re: Swearing on public servers
Posted by IronWarrior on Sun, 06 Aug 2006 18:19:54 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

j_ball430 wrote on Sun, 06 August 2006 10:39IWarriors wrote on Sun, 06 August 2006 11:05j_ball430 wrote on Sun, 06 August 2006 16:53These are the stupidest discussions. We've had them several times over. A server owner is free to do what they want. If they want to kick you for saying "lol", then they have every right to do so... as ridiculous as it may seem to you or others. They pay for the bandwidth, they can do with it as they please. You have no right to claim otherwise. Also, the ESRB rating isn't a requirement. It's simply a suggestion as to who should be allowed to play with respects to their ages. Ultimately, the parents are the ones who decide if their kids get to play.

If you host a server. You can do as you want with it. You create the rules. You enforce the rules. If someone asks you not to swear, respect their wishes or leave. It's that simple. You have no right to say that they're wrong. Agree with it or not, it's their decision.

That sounds like naziism.. do what we say or die... good thing our countrys aint like that.
How is that naziism? Are you going to call your parents nazis when they ask you not to swear in front of them or guests? If so, then you can twist just about everything into being a form of naziism.

The idea is simple: you control what you own. You're not forcing people to obey by your rules and stay in your server. They're free to leave if they don't like it. It's far from being fascist.

I might have used a too strong word for this, but what you trying to say, cause this is my server, you do as I say or elas.

I hate server owners who go by that, it shouldnt be like that, yes they have that right to say that as they own it and maybe put money towards it, but that doesnt mean they are right or just to say that.