It doesn't exactly seem like he's talking about suspicion, in fact, it looks like he's telling me I have it. (which is ironic since if he positively knew I was bypassing, why wouldn't he report to crimson? Unless of course he knew he had no leg to stand on. Which would be the case)

And useless time? Yeah, I guess it would really be useless time to check players and see if they're innocent, wouldn't it. I mean it's only your job as a moderator to do it, but that's OK. It's useless to check to see if people are innocent, right?

The topic goes on about how testing doesn't work. Even though this is clearly wrong seeing as how many servers have banned many people through testing and screenshots. And at least when they do ban these people they have solid proof and if they were using RG while doing so it's solid proof for RG to ban them. Not only that, if you're actually experienced enough with the game you come to look for things suggesting that a player cheats. I've gotten a fraps of some guy that did 10.5 damage with his GDI rifle and 52.5 per headshot with it. Don't you think it would be smart to like do the same in the case for your server? not to do it while you're a mod, too, i guess. Since you don't always join with the nickname anyways.

Anyways the biggest deal was that some days after I was banned, I had joined the EoE server. After awhile they accused me of cheating. They asked me to do a test and I shot around the guy's head (while he was moving around and other people were shooting at me) and I passed, they say that Koss said that we were cheating in their server and so that's the reason they banned me moments later. As far as i remember you were "friends" with EoE maybe played some wars and everything and you were probably close to them at the time. So yeah any fair player would get pissed when you guys decide we were cheating and tell others that we were when by your own admission, you don't have ANYTHING to go on.

This is where being knowledgable about the game comes in handy. Knowing what units do how much damage. I instictively check this every time I play to make sure a guy isn't cheating.
1. To see if he's doing the correct damage
2. To see if he gets headshots over and over and never once gets a body shot. There are MANY ways to prove cheaters are cheating, and I'm sure that about 90% of them, or probably more, don't know how to "switch a cheat off" if that's even possible with the cheat they're using, because it isn't possible for a lot of cheats.
It's just the fact that someone in Koss told EoE we cheated when we didn't, and you had nothing to back that up.
