I can't believe it took me this long to think of this, but here's my revelation of the day:

Okay, say you are online claiming that you're 15. Everybody then thinks different and calls you a liar, and then you say, "okay, fine, I'm 23," but in reality, you're actually 15. Just because you confessed to "lying" and then "told the truth" doesn't necessarily prove anything.

Who says that this isn't the case here? Maybe Crimson's just trying to get all of you fucktards to shut the fuck up? What does she have to lose in this community by admitting to doing something wrong? Nothing, really. People are still going to use RenGuard, play on n00bstories, and post on these forums. JUST LIKE THEY HAVE DONE, DO, AND WILL CONTINUE TO DO.

So what if she loses trust in some people? The people that she "loses trust" with are people that never really trusted her in the first place.

In all seriousness, IT'S THE FUCKING INTERNET. For all you know, I could be some 300-pound fat chick with a beard. Does it matter? Nope. I could say that I'm jacking off while typing this. I could claim that I want your dick. IT DOESN'T FUCKING MATTER. Play the game. Post on the forums. Quit making a big deal out of issues.
