I have every right to do so, and it certainly isn't some result of any preplanning to turn on someone. I like copies of my conversations, in case I forget something or I choose to read back on something I discussed earlier. Logging does come in handy.

Do you turn them over to others without the permission of the person that partook in the conversation?

That's the issue.

I am so very glad you chose to do the right thing. Delete them now, so you can clear your conscience.
