Supposedly they're working on individual suits for infantry. The gist of it is that they'll have tiny, tiny camera-type things woven into the clothing. It'll take what it sees on one side of the wearer and project it to the other side. So it won't be invisibility per se, but it'll be more like the Predator's cloak.

Man that would be cool, but it would be REALLY cool if it came with a plasma caster, wrist blades, combi stick, smartdisc, net gun, medicomp, and of course... a self-destruct device. Man that would be so cool. Anyway your right, they are trying to make that type of camo, I believe its called active camouflage. I also heard they are working on a type of camo that would change depending on the environment your in, I mean it wouldn't be invisible, but if you were in a forest and you had green camo, then all of a sudden it snowed, your camo would change to fit the environment...meaning a white camo.
