I would love it if I/my parents could choose my own school. I personally hate the public education system because of the fact that students can't behave, are morally and mentally disabled and very disrespectful to everyone around them. I would love to go to a private school or be home schooled where I can have a better environment.

I agree with your statement that it would create better quality school's. Especially if the school's didn't want to lose students. School loses students, less need for more teachers, teachers get fired, less quality education/schooling. It makes perfect sense. Having said that a student/parent should be able to choose their own school, if that was the case, it would probably filter out a lot of the students who don't care and make the school system horrible.
