Subject: Re: The meaning of life?
Posted by Sn1per74* on Sat, 11 Aug 2007 17:14:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

mrpirate wrote on Sat, 11 August 2007 10:49Starbuzz wrote on Sat, 11 August 2007 03:25mrpirate wrote on Fri, 10 August 2007 18:39religion, in my eyes, is unnecessary and divisive; I don't think the world would suffer if people realized how ridiculous it is

I don't think religion is the sole cause of all evil. It certainly is not the root of evil. There are other things that divides humans. Some are barriers that were there naturally and some created by us that work against us.

Ethnicity, pride, revenge, greed...these are all natural things that separate us and keep us from unifying.

Flags, countries, borders, national pride...all are sources of division that are created by us. These cause division and many times have led to war.

Suppose you take away religion...do you think it is going to stop murders from taking place? Do you think crime and wars will stop? I don't think so. Humans are flawed beings and all the things I mentioned above will keep us from living in peace. So taking away religion won't solve anything.

it'd still be a step in the right direction

You're crazy. I like my religion. I don't want to lose it. It gives me something to look foward to when I die, and keeps me from making the wrong choices.