For the price of a laptop you can get a bitch'in desktop computer. I wouldn't suggest that you build one with your current level of knowledge about computers so look at pre-built ones. As that goes I haven't bought a pre-built in a long time but I would guess that newegg is good for that too.

My laptop cost $2,600 but for a grand less you can get something like this:

I couldn't personally vouch for the i-buy brand but you can see what you can get for half the price of a laptop.
