
Subject: Re: Who's got the accent?

Posted by EvilWhiteDragon on Sat, 22 Sep 2007 10:58:34 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Darkknight wrote on Fri, 21 September 2007 02:28 Well I don't have an accent other than american. My dad is retired airforce. We moved every 2 1/2 years so i was never any place long enough to get one.

Their are far more accents in the united states then they 2 you mentioned. For example my relatives are Pennsylvania-Dutch. Its like an american german accent. If you call it "Pennsylvania-Dutch" then I would think it would be more like an American-Dutch accent Yes Dutch it a different language then german.

More ontopic:

Technically British-English is the original form of english, since the USA-English originated out of a mix of British-English, Dutch, German, Itallian, and whatever other country had lot of people migrating to the USA. This is probably also the reason why you say it like to spell it, as that would be the most logical way to learn it.
