If you feel there is something that NEEDS to be moderated, and its not dealt with, report it. That's what the button is for.

I am back in school at the moment, so the only times I do have to check are breaks between classes and don't have the time to sit and read every post of every thread. However if something shows up as being reported then I know where to go and, assuming I have the time, fix it.
Most thread topics last a very long time. Up to weeks. I think that's plenty time. You seen how many pages there are in each of them? It's until the 60th page, and when it settles down, one of you mods lock it.... >.>

So? The length of a thread has no bearing on whether or not it should remain open. Locking a topic is simply because we do not want more posts in it. Why should it matter if a topic reaches even 100 pages? I didn't realize reaching that many pages broke a forum rule...
