To me sound is sound and the sound I have now is pretty clear through I do need speakers.

It's worth it for ancient motherboards such as the one in my server, but modern onboard sound cards are normally fine, and most motherboards come with like 6 Audio I/O ports you can retask, so unless you have serious professional audio needs, you'd be fine.

Someone correct me if I'm wrong.

Also, thanks for the random recommendations on places to buy from the UK, and UK only topic FTW!

Onboard audio is ok, But using custom sound cards is better for bass quality, you can also push out more sound and when you have a good set of speakers probably with a subwoofer it's pwnage.

Also, yes, UK only topics for the win!
