
Subject: Re: pro-only servers?

Posted by archerman on Tue, 23 Sep 2008 17:36:42 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Nukelt15 wrote on Tue, 23 September 2008 18:29: I wonder- what defines a "pro" for you? You've given us a word, but you've failed to define it- what characteristics define a "pro?"

I ask because I've yet to see a definition for the term that isn't as shallow as most of the people who apply it to themselves. Usually it is thrown around by people who think score is everything, or that being able to headshot while bouncing around like a bunny rabbit automatically makes them the master of the game. So, when you say "pro," what exactly do you mean? what I mean with pro is; players with a deep gaming culture, which makes them fair, good, and humble.

to be more specific, I don't want any retards to join to the server just for sniping for like 40 min, then join the rest of the team with sbh nuke or something. what that kind of people do is, just snipe for no purpose (probably the almost half of the team are sniping in the tunnels, not even in field), then when the other team's defence is down, they suddenly become the most cooperative sonofab*es in the world, joining u with a flamer when there are 4 or 5 stanks waiting for more to come. (I haven't seen exactly that kind of a thing but I'm expecting u to understand what I mean) that's the 1 of the lamest thing about this game because what they do is sniping people that don't try to snipe them.

1 other thing is, sbh nukers on islands.mix. they just keep nuking and nuking even they know they will fail, resulting on giving a large amount of pts and credits to the other team. I'm not getting deeper on that because I guess u know what I mean.

these are only some examples of such people, I bet we all have long stories about those people.

I hope u can understand this post, since my English is on the rocks
