I know what you're saying, but I think you misunderstand where I'm coming from. It's not Obama that has made me how I feel today, although a black president not too long ago would've sounded very strange, it's just the first campaign I've actually paid attention to. We're a relatively young nation and we've accomplished so much, and defeated many of the social discriminations. Like almost having a woman president, too.

And yeah, He kinda messed up huh? Seemed like he was scared to say his middle name. I thought it was kind of strange, in a way, when I heard for the first time his middle name was Hussein, but I think I'm a little bit smarter than to really try to associate it with Saddam..
