
Subject: Re: Your penis removed durning surgery?
Posted by Dover on Thu, 30 Apr 2009 03:31:17 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Doitle wrote on Wed, 29 April 2009 10:20Dover wrote on Wed, 29 April 2009 09:46Regardless, I'd say the loss of an organ (Especially one with the...ahem...special consideration of the penis) makes the risk in getting permission first worthwhile. You stand nothing to lose by waiting.

Yeah, except your life potentially. I already stated why they would not want to put someone under twice when they could put them under once. The risks are too high.

Perhaps, but the choice was not the doctor's to make.

Again, let me note that in this case there was no cancer. In the persuit of prolonging this man's life, his doctor has essentially destroyed this man's quality of life. Which of the two is more important?
