

---

Subject: Re: Splitting the record - about the virtual lock Posted by darkdragon on Tue, 01 Sep 2009 04:49:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

spotelmo wrote on Mon, 31 August 2009 23:32

Care to expand on this?

it's easier to regulate cigarettes and alcohol because it's easy to put a tax stamp on both and put them in a convenience store. we know who's producing/importing them, and it's pretty much world wide legal to sell them.

meth on the other hand is produced in the trunk of some moron's car. likely won't be sold on the shelves of your local grocery store, and isn't legal anywhere that i know of.

cocaine and heroin is mostly produced by drug lords in south america and afghanistan and even if America made them legal, other countries won't and the drug wars would continue.

yeah but without our money and our blood. By the way why is it those drugs are made that way ?

You bitch about how much people pay in taxes the war on drugs dumps 40 billion <(fed and state combined) a year down a rat hole where we'll never see it again.

That is money that could be used for far better things for the American people like oh healthcare.

---