
Subject: Re: The Pointsfix and the Game Listings
Posted by EvilWhiteDragon on Tue, 27 Oct 2009 10:45:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Herr wrote on Mon, 26 October 2009 18:54 Why would someone hand this power over from a person who, as you stated, has never abused it before to a team that contains a few people who have proven their self not to be trustworthy at all, in the past. A person who deletes her own topics questioning this same matter where obviously all of the replies vote against her, or someone who has always been supported by the Jellycomm but decided to suddenly change his mind and backstab the community for it contains a few people who disagree with his opinion.

Im not saying TT is bad or can't be trusted, not even close, it contains several close friends who I do honor for all their efforts for the community.

I just find it a hard decision giving these nicknames to a group that contains a few people of who I think, can't handle the power. Especially when they currently remain in the hands of someone who I would trust with my most valuable belongings.

Considering the EA support argument, we both know EA couldn't care less about Westwood's old stuff. Of course they will welcome the first group with open arms who offer support to a game that is bleeding to death. I do not really consider that trustworthy.

F.Y.I. This is not meant as hate towards TT. Like I said, TT contains several friends who I believe are really using TT as the right way to fight for the existence of Renegade and are not power-happy or anything like that. I really hope they keep up the excellent work they have put in the renegade community so far.

That's why it would perhaps be a good decision to create a commission that gets to set rules on this topic after which they can judge all communities in regard to the set rules. The communities that score best will get the highest (available) nick and so forth.
