I just noticed this. Is it safe to assume you cheat at StarCraft, too? Cheats for StarCraft are pretty easy to get and use, so if you would go through the effort of cheating in Renegade, I think it's pretty safe to assume you cheat in StarCraft (Especially since there's more to gain there).

If you do, can I have your IP to add to my banlist?

YES i do cheat on Starcraft I will even say i use Zynastors Oblivion and i suck at starcraft ill admit to that. i only play UMS games.

On a side note i dont even know my damn IP it aint my comp aside the fact i have multiple comps to access (only one plays ren sadly) edit: my ingame name is Trojan-bich1259... if i dont get banned soon though its pointless because i spoof anyway

Most used spoofs are Stacked red a black Pantera, Red single *name.ini missing(or not found), i also use green and white stacked Westwood i very rarely use other spoofs and most likely any triple stacked spoof is me

Also i use no other names unless i get banned on that hand i create a new one and wait til i can recreate tro

This also applies to any other games aside from ren

Good to know. I auto-ban obvious spoofs on-sight, so you don't need to tell me about anything with colors or stacks or other invalid account names.

Welcome to my banlist. On a side note, you should quit being a little hacking bitch, UMS games or not.
