@ troopr02: lol my question was not even about 1v1 but about someone who is incredibly successful in a AOW setting i.e, public games, funwars, comm games.

I am pretty sure there are many others who would do well but maybe like 10 or so who are overall really good. I mentioned Spooky because I have played countless games against and with him. And so have someone to rate against with.

For me a good player is 50/50 this:

someone who knows what he is doing, knows what to buy and what to do with it, knows when to make a move as the game unfolds, the overall strategy in a game. Knows how to adapt to any situation, understands the entire game dynamics, economy, vehicles, etc etc. Of course, this is just 50% and so you find very few players who know this core of the game logic.

the other 50% is having a good aim, knowing how to fly, drive, sneak...the basics.

Actually I think it should be 80/20! With 80 being understanding the game logic which most don't. The other 20% comes easily with a few months of play.

So in that case, a vast majority of players who consider themselves pr0s just fail overall cos the game is really about knowing when to do what and why instead of just racking up an incredible k/d with a sniper or Orca for example.

So that is really my question; a player who is overall very well developed in all areas. From what I have seen, Spooky can't be counted out of it or I should say he fulfills all the requirements!

I try to improve too but like I said above, if I were to rate myself, then I am only at 30-40% like 99% of the players who are good in either a vehicle or sniping but have very poor grasp of strategy (which is the main point of the game).

I wish more CW folks will play with their real nicks like Spooky does. I have seen tildeth and clear play for example but not long enough with them.
