wouldnt it be easier just to have a blacklist of known cheat skins/mods instead of having everything 'authorized'. this type of blacklist would not only be smaller and faster (if im correct in guessing on how this program checks for said cheats/mods) but then every person who makes their own skins wouldnt have to submit their skins for approval. and if another cheat/mod was made either someone in the community would find it and submit it. or very very few people would have it, which has been the case for most of these for a long time.
