from personal experience, these types of games are actually not that bad as it is claimed. A lot of the factors for someone liking it comes down to how good they are (the better you are, the more inclined you will be keep playing) and if playing alongside friends. The resulting "thrill" keeps repetitive boredom away.

I still play the original Doom (the first ever game I played back in 1994) multiplayer; the only game that has made me laugh out loud more is Renegade. It seems very pointless but incredibly funny when you are kicking ass lol. Here's someone's video; I can play this "shit" all day long:

The same applies for every deathmatch type game. When I initially bough UT3 for trying out RenX, I played a lot of CTF games. I was surprised I wasn't outright sucking and stealing flags lol that I kept playing. Of course, eventually I kinda got bored of it though I still have it just in case.
