
Subject: Re: Help picking a laptop
Posted by TEAM MDK on Sun, 30 Sep 2012 00:42:35 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Croatoan wrote on Sat, 29 September 2012 16:44TEAM MDK wrote on Sat, 29 September 2012 15:47Alienware all the way style - looks - performance
<http://www.dell.com/uk/p/alienware-laptops?ST=alienware&dgc=ST&cid=41141&lid=1069630&acd=239715600820560>

I'm sorry to say, but your clearly behind the times.

Alienware was bought by Dhell not so long ago and ever since then, they've had "issues".

They've basically lost all credibility.

maybe so but still a danm fine lappy...I never pay to much atention to reviews written by clueless users who delete os files or need to read a book just to turn on a pc...

I have owned loads and with no issues I couldnt sort for myself and even after 12 mth use still sell on for ok prices towards the next one some one rec this <http://www.newegg.com/Product/Product.aspx?Item=N82E16834230407> basicly all the same parts made in the same country just inside a diff case just like any pc or lappy out there no matter where you look Alienware lappys always come out tops even in a google search <http://computers.toptenreviews.com/gaming-laptops/> most ppl who put them down are the ppl who can not afford one or have never used one .