Omar007 wrote on Tue, 22 January 2013 03:40
With other words, saving the kernel state or not has no influence.

That's good to know, I was just theorycrafting anyway since it worked fine for me in Windows 8 without any rebooting required. I had the bug once, but that was years ago on an XP machine and the old reboot trick worked.