Subject: Thanks
Posted by General Havoc on Sat, 18 Oct 2003 12:23:05 GMT

It becuse Windows is setup to be "idiot proof" by default meaning it hides system files and ddl's. As a general rule, if you don't know how to turn off this feature then you probably don't need to make these files visible.

Anyway: Tools > Folder Options > View > Hidden files and folders > Show hidden files and folders

Also Tools > Folder Options > View > Hide extensions for known file types