That's not the welfare we are bashing. If you pay into a fund and draw from it when you're out of work, that's not a bad thing. Heck, I was on unemployment for a couple of months too, but I put in a heck of a lot more than I took from it. It's the people who take more than they give and make no effort to stop sucking the working people's teats that are the problem. Go make 'em work.

"I work hard, because people on welfare depend on me!"
