A little bundle of cells only becomes human when there's an active brain attached to it. Until the central nervous system develops, you as a person do not exist in that body. Likewise, after your central nervous system fails, you are dead. Your other organs exist only to serve your brain; that is the part that matters. The brain develops somewhere during the second trimester. Before that happens, there is no baby, only a parasitic clump of biomatter that has no thoughts, feelings, or decision making capability.
