Yeah. So I come home from work, do some work on SWMOD in LE, save it all, and start up Renegade normally. Renguard starts, I launch Renegade, but I notice everything is running wicked slow for some reason. I wasn't running that many other programs, so I decided to take a look. Here's what I found:

WTF!?!

(and yes, my windows logon name is Lord Nelson. Lol.)

Yeah. I restarted and it worked fine, but its still worrisome that it should ever take up that much processor power.

Reminds me of the Renegade mod tools. They love eating your memory up, no matter how much you have. With 512mb PC2700 DDR, after working for several ours on Level Edit or RenX, I find that memory is down to 10mb left... It's happened probably 8 times before.

Yeah, but LevelEdit is a much more complex program than Renguard. Lol.
