Start > Control Panel > Add/Remove Programs > RenGuard

Or just re-run the installer and select uninstall :rolleyes:

Do you mind doing something? Go into a multiplayer game now, hit F8 and enter "FPS" then hit enter. Take a screenshot, by hitting the "PrntScrn" button.

Once you remove it, go into the same game or a similar one (same map, similar number of players) and take a screenshot again, by hitting "PrntScrn".

Then post the images, or email them to me.

I can't uninstall it either because the uninstaller doesn't seem to remove anything, although after choosing uninstall it says it has finished performaing maintenance, and the renguard icon is gone from add/remove programs.

I'm curious how badly it hurts your performance. Also post your system specs if you don't mind?

One thing he missed out was that if you hit PrintScrn, you also have to paste it into a photo/image editor such as paint.

Just remember, once you remove it... and if you're suspected of cheating... And banned from a server because you can't take a screenshot...
Don't bitch about RenGuard not working because "it made you run slow and lag"

After all, its had no effect on performance wise for me, runs the same as it used to.

lies, RenGuard does NOT make your renegade lag :rolleyes:

if anything makes Renegade lag then its CP1, which is an optional install what so, if it doesn't lag on your spec it can't ever.....it's not like it was tested on every computer configuration.

renguard sits idle, when you are playing. there is no network activity while you are playing. it's only on startup.

thus, there is no possible way it can cause lag.

Unless they have a terrible computer that can barely handle running Renegade :rolleyes:

There must be network activity if it can verify you have not tried to add anything to ren/data during the course of the game..and at a guess it does this every so often to prevent serious misbalance in points if a renguard user decided to cheat.

also, why roll eyes? some people cannot afford good computers (or do not have access to a better network connection than 56k in their area, and renegade has one of the worst cases of multiplayer lag I've seen so it's only natural that people get uptight about even the slighest increase in lag).

nodprick3 just wants something to blame for having a 14ton computer that takes 5 hours to calculate 2+2, or does there happen to be too many digits in that?

As if I had never known that, I used to play on a comp w/ a 16MB gfx card. Then I thought maybe if I saved at least some of everything I gained that perhaps one day I could buy a better one. But now I have a comp w/ a 64MB gfx card, yet Renegade still has issues from time to time.

About the 'roll eyes' - I had just gotten outta bed and it happened to look best for looking upward to mac's post at the time :stern:

Start > Control Panel> Add Remove Programs > get rid of renguard

Then you go to your Westwood/Renegade and get rid of Game and your renguard.dll and rename your game2 to game

I want to see how much RenGuard affects his system stats. Let him show us what it looks like with RenGuard before we show him how to remove it; then show us after.

If you have low RAM i bet renguard will cause lag.. just because your running Game 1, game 2, and renegade all at the same time. takes up a lot of CPU usage.

Renegade.exe and Game.exe would still be running for a normal user.

So for a Renguard user, they're just running an extra little tiny program.

Renegade.exe, Game2.exe, Game.exe. Even on my old machine I noticed no real change.

If you honestly have a huge ass FPS drop, try F8 C [enter].

it does not scan untill a new file is put into the directory
