You're both idiots, I'll explain why.

SuperFlyingFungus: I count at least 13 images ranging from "oil pimp," inferring that the war was for oil, to "Bush = Hitler" and "Fuck middle America." That is not six, that's at least 13. In addition to burning a President Bush effigy, attempting to start a riot, and attacking police officers. You are an idiot, please try again.

Panther: This wasn't made to impress anyone, it was meant to show exactly what was shown. I put "left" in quotation marks to signal that I wasn't sure that these people even constituted the actual left section of society. They're beyond left, they're simply retarded and cannot think for themselves using the facts that are readily available. You are also an idiot, please try again... And since both of you are too stupid to write out the proper acronym for my name, I'll say it again. My name is not ack. It never has been ack, and never will be ack.

Okay, 13. You win. 13 questionable signs. Out of what, thousands? And this cameraman was obviously hunting for the most controversial signs he could find.

And the site itself states that the group that started a riot and attacked the cops hated liberals just as much as Bush. The "black bloq" or something.

You mean those 13 signs are prostrated by people like you who find the logical route of attack against an entire core of beliefs the personal thoughts of 13 different people? It's not like any of them are in positions of any political importance. They don't represent anyone else.

You want an actual riot? Look at the 2000 protest in front of the DNC. Rage Against the Machine really got the bloodlust into those conservative eyes. So much so the police had to come in and rubber bullet everyone. Rent Live at the Grand Olympic Auditorium sometime and see for yourself. It's one of the special features.

Attacking Iraq for a military base is very much overkill seeing as how they had no trouble mobilizing around Iraq. Some countries were willing to help, and they already have a base in Israel. Spending upwards of $150 Billion simply to establish a military base, expand influence over the middle-east and to "liberate" a nation is absurd.

[Heres where the controversy begins]

You are right. His number 1 priority was morality and to do something good for the world as an American President. I feel so much safer in this country. Now that I know that 9/11 and Saddam Hussein were directly linked and that he had weapons of mass destruction I feel much safer. Now that Hussein is no longer in power, we can all hold hands and sing peaceful songs.

Does it not seem at all possible to Bush supporters that, even if you do not consider it fact, it is entirely possible and plausible? Does it not seem odd that the connection between 9/11 and Hussein was never established and that the reason for attacking Iraq changed like 3 times? (Combat terrorism->WMD's->Liberate Iraq)

This is your $150 Billion. Do you want it to go to corporations? Or would you prefer to have it help the education system, Hospital, medical systems and to help combat poverty?

Oh and if you want to know, my father was sacked from his job in 2001 when California's education budget was cut by $20 Billion and there were many job cuts. There was a huge job-freeze from 2001 - 2003 and the situation isn't much better. Now I wonder where that money went. Or rather who is wiping their ass with $100 bills.

Also my old school used to recieve $30,000 grants every 6 months from the State to spend on Science. Well that program took the axe in 2001.

Let me just bring something to your attention.

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A47812-2004Jun16.html>

I'll just emphasize the first paragraph.

Quote:

The Sept. 11 commission reported yesterday that it has found no "collaborative relationship" between Iraq and al Qaeda, challenging one of the Bush administration's main justifications for the war in Iraq.

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/americas/3118262.stm>

Quote:

We have no evidence that Saddam Hussein was involved with the 11 September attacks
President Bush
(Take a look at the little beige box at the beginning)

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/americas/3119676.stm>

Well, if Bush's administration states this, then am I to believe the biased article?

Sure, Hussein has funded terrorism before, but he did not play a part in 9/11. I'm sure he loved to watch it, but he didn't play a part in it. Especially not fund it seeing as how loaded Osama is.

That link did not put anyone to shame.

Theres tons more info about the absence of the Hussein 9/11 link. Google it or use Yahoo or Reuters.

USA Today Bush, speaking to troops in Tampa yesterday, did not mention an Iraq-al Qaeda link, saying only that Iraq "sheltered terrorist groups."

Exactly, Bush never said anything about merely only going after Al Qaeda. Thats what all you people seem to forget. After the Attack on 9/11, he said he would hunt down terrorists and the countries who Harbor them. No one seemed to be against him then. But now you all accuse him of taking an unnessesary war with Iraq and saying that all these reasons like 'GAIN' are the only reason for him being in this war. Well the website AirCraftKiller posted clearly states how Iraq had ties with terrorism.

You both just missed the point COMPLETELY. I did not say anything about working class people, or people who work for large corporations. I did not generalize either.

The point is that the war was instigated by Bush/Cheney. Why? Well the cost of the war would go straight back to those corporations. Do you think the "poor middle class workers" are going to get ANY of that money other than what they are already getting paid? Its going to the high-up people, the chairmen, CEO's Executives, Directors. Strangely enough almost all of Bush's cabinet members and advisors have ties to major corporations. Including Lockheed Martin, Haliburton, BP (British Petroleum, AKA "Arco"), Exxon, GM (General Motors), and Chevron. (There are more of course).

Now how much of this $150 Billion are workers ever going to see? Nothing out of their ordinary wages.

Quote:

So they can pay their workers, and create jobs, and donate to the communities they serve...

1. Of course they need to pay their workers, but those workers would have been paid regardless if there was a war or not. The corporations those workers were employed by weren't nearing bankruptcy.

2. Well if budgets are being cut from elsewhere, and people are getting laid off? Take a look at this.

Some of those workers may have lost their jobs due to the lack of money to the corporations. Ever think of that? No one is guaranteed a paycheck if their job is on the line. And extra taxation is not going to have a positive effect. The corporation wont take a huge hit like that to their income, they will take it out on the working class.

You think anyone can just form a corporation, hire 20,000 people, and they all sit on their asses and do nothing and just collect big dollars from the government? Do you know NOTHING about economics? Or do you know only "BIG CORPORATION BAD! ME WANT DINNER!"

I work for a large corporation myself. A corporation so large that it once had a larger market cap than Microsoft a few years ago. My paycheck is directly derived from the success of my work. People higher up make money based on their decisions and the ability to manage effectively. A company grows by successfully filling a need and being paid to fulfill that need by other companies or end consumers. When people do their job well, the company makes more money which means they can do more things, expand their market, fulfill needs for more people, research new and innovative ideas... did I say HIRE MORE PEOPLE? When a company does a bad job, when they are not fulfilling a need, the company shrinks, jobs are lost. How many people do you think Haliburton hired to do the work over in Iraq? Do you think they just stopped fulfilling their other obligations with the rest of their customers and sent the existing employees over there? C'mon... think about it, ok?

Thank you for confirming this for me.

I'm not a fucking idiot for christ's sake.

Education budget cuts in CA -> School districts cannot pay SBC Corp. -> Job Cut.

Quote:

"BIG CORPORATION BAD! ME WANT DINNER!"

And don't try and make me look like I'm just here to hound big corporations just for the hell of it.

Let me break this down (even further so nobody can misinterpret it)

Imagine if you have $1000 of someone else's money, and you are allowed to spend it wherever you like. At the same time, you also own shop. Where is that money going to be spent?

This is all that happened in the last years. Whether you agree if it was intentional or not, that is ultimately what happened.

Shit, I don't want to continue talking about this. This is my last post on this thread.

Someone remind me what the topic is, I think we've lost track.

Answer: I would invest in upgrades to the shop or advertisement to bring in more customers.
