Has anyone found a way to make them work yet? Well besides the "Carryall=Yes" tag that way sucks and I refuse to use it.

If you got close to making it work post what you did.

The Dropship is a hidden unit in Tiberian Sun.

Use Tiber to change the settings on that to get it to land and take off properly.

You're an idiot if you think tiberian fiends, Umagons, dropships, orca transports, Slavick, Oxanna, etc. are hidden units. And you realize that you're posting this here, right?

To get the Dropship working requires the unit loading menu to function, and to have the Dropship actually deliver the units. The unit loading menu is supposed to popup before a game, you choose the amount of units and types from a list depending on the amount of credits available, the Dropship then is supposed to deliver these units at certain times during the game.

you missed "at a specified location".
And it can only be done on single player missions.
I think DeeZire modified the first GDI Mission to make dropship loadouts possible.

That is not what I am trying to do, I am talking about building one on a helipad if you tell it to move it tries to land and than dose the retarded pilot thing. It keeps going up and down and going everywhere but will not land.

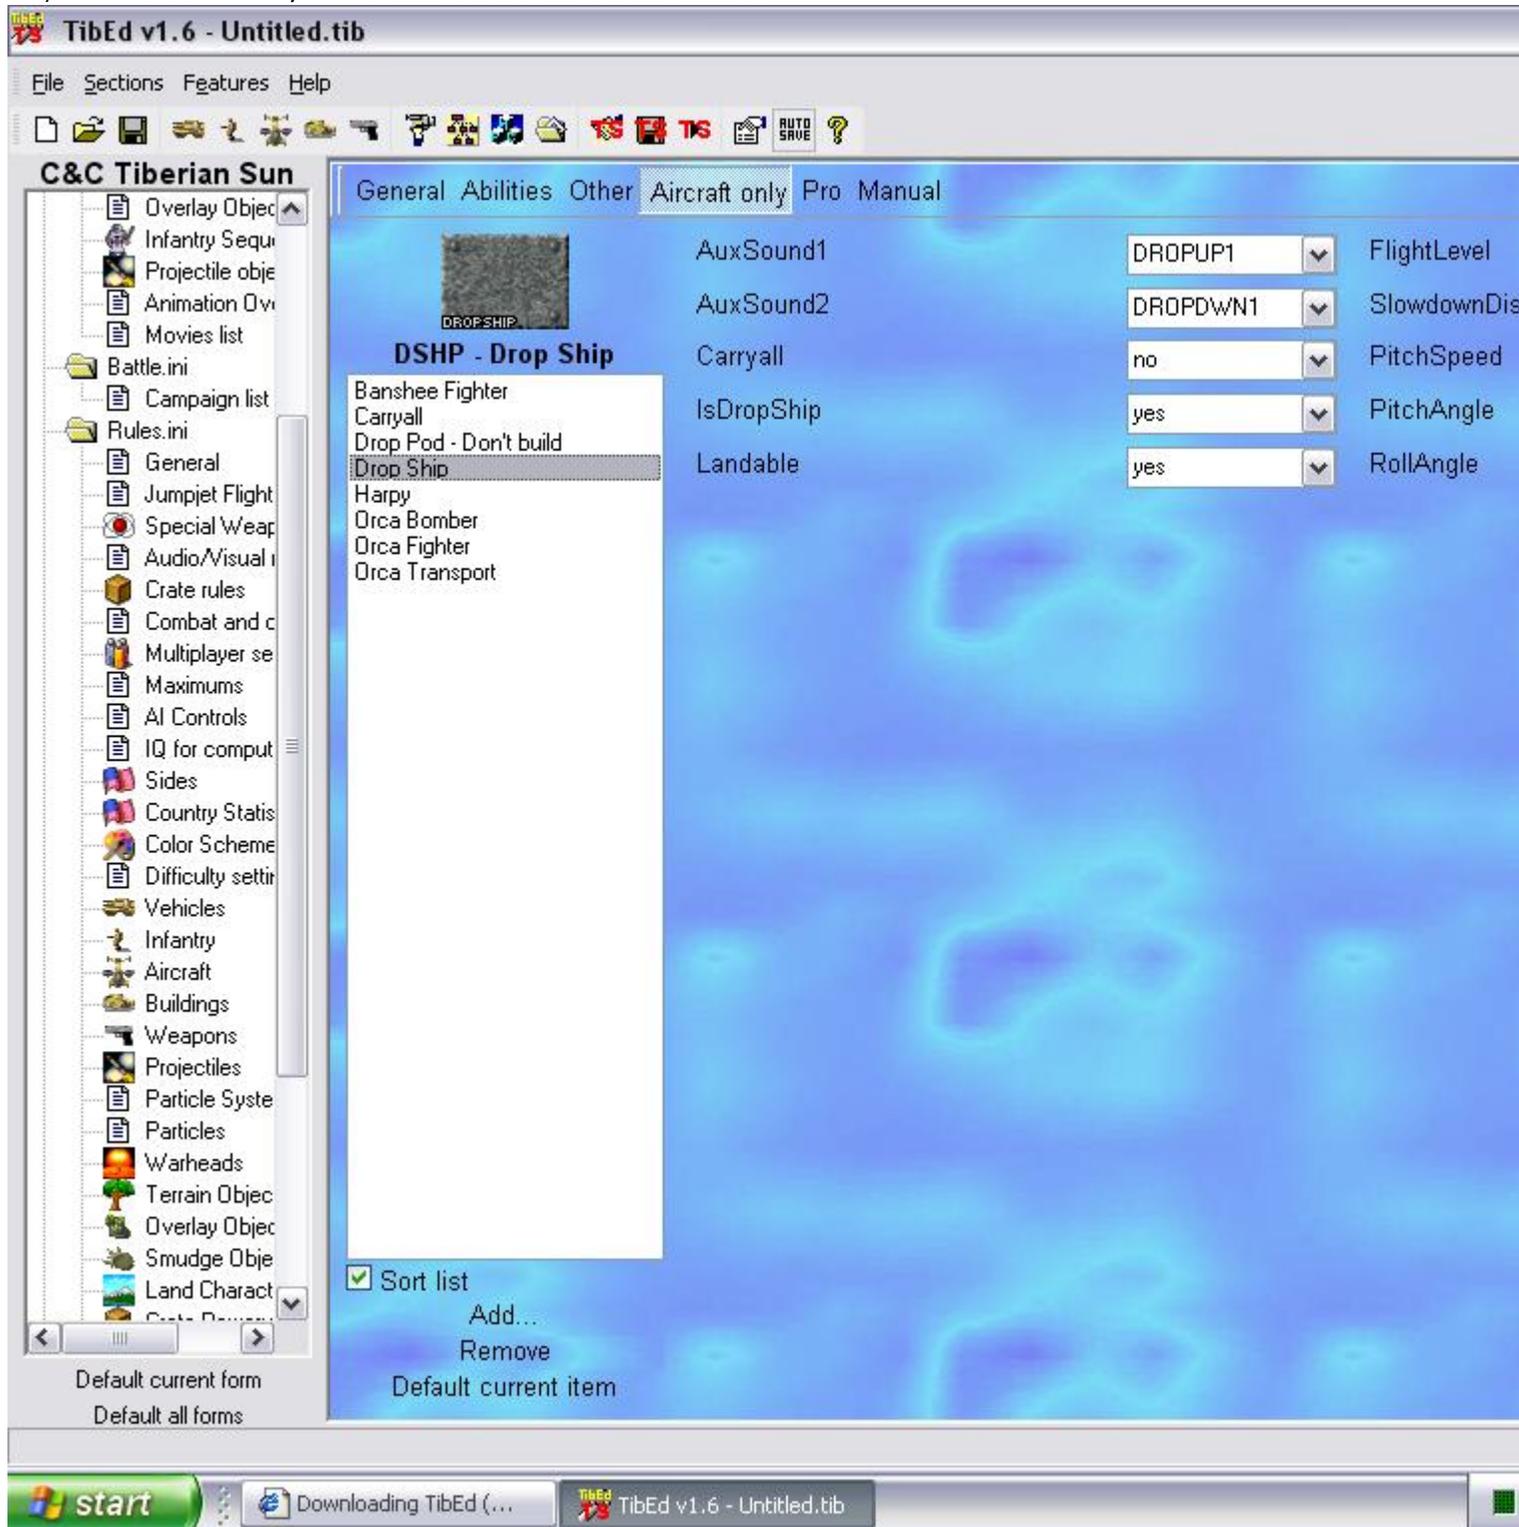

Although if you put a hover MRLS nearb it, it lands on the MRLS?

No, it is something else. The Orca Transport doesn't have that tag and it does it to. Also doing that would make it unable to haul vehicles.

Try giving it a dock structure. Like the helipad. I remember awhile ago when I was modding with Tibsun and I made the dropship drop bombs. And I set it to the Helipad.

It has been concluded that the only way to get it to work is editing sun.exe with a hex editor.

I have a hex editor but I look at all the squares and funky letters and am thinking, "WTF?"

So where can I get a tutorial on hex editing?

Lol no, those settings are not even in the Exe file, I used Tibed but you can just use XCCmixer to extract the ini files and edit them right from there.
