The serial is encypted tho, so unless they've "cracked the code" it wont do them much good if they had "bad intentions". On the other foot that is the best way to verify who ppl are since everyones will be different. I could really care less about the PW thingy tho. Like I stated I imagine they jack your encrypted serial for verification/record purposes ie go online and do bad shit using REOL and you may get a nice surpise

Thanks for the information !!

Well, anyone who can get an encrypted serial probably knows where to go and put that encrypted serial in the registry. but, i'm not saying they're using it for that, i mean, you log on to it, it probably has no choice but get those things. although i don't see that it would be neccessary since i don't think you get banned from it or anything.

:rolleyes: Yeah, because Dante will want to steal your serial...

Obviously it'll get your serial as that is needed to play online. That is why you only use a 3rd party server when it is being run by people you can trust. People that only want to make the community better, people like Dante and his little group of cyber elves.

According tho this logic, it means WW/EA are trying to scam us, because they get our passes and serials when we log in!

 :rolleyes:

Try not to try and spread bad PR about REOL.

Pretending to be Javaxcx was pathetic. Almost as pathetic as whining about using a valid program to enjoy the game.

I'm talking out of my ass here, because I was not part of the REOL development team. I do know a bit of how WOL works though, so I will offer these logical explanations:

1. REOL was built to emulate WOL...emulation means acting the same, so if WOL needs a serial to connect so does REOL.

2. The serial number validation is part of the WOL/REOL login protocol.

3. Having an authentication/challenge keeps people from logging into WOL/REOL with a simple MIRC client. Yes, some people have bypassed this by using the "relay"...but guess what...the relay uses your serial number as well, since WOL/REOL will not let you connect without it. Last I heard though REOL was going to have some extra measures to prevent relay usage.

That being said, I'm not sure what to think about accusing Dante of stealing serial numbers.

Everytime you play a game on WOL you are "giving" them your serial number. Its part of the login process. Dante and Scorpio worked hard to make REOL possible, and well...all I can think of is the saying "Don't bite the hand that feeds you".

REOL does indeed recieve your Serial key, how ever it isn't stored and if it was what do we need to do with it... nothing.

This is something that is required for WOL so we didn't want to have it this way, and we can't do anything about it atm.

So don't worry, nothing will be done with your serial key that you need to worry about.
