Better use a proxy, a fake ID and e-mail address.
It still sounds risky for a gag. Sad to say, but people love to hate. You may disrupt their activity's for a day, but "take them down".
Anyway, good luck - 44

Part of me looks upon this as idiots attacking idiots, and the end result being worthless.
Another part of me suggests posting this on Slashdot and digg for some real effect.

OK, one thing I see wrong is that if this is being posted all over the place to round up hundreds of people to "attack" them, isn't it quite likely that somebody there is going to become aware of this whole plot - some idiotic doofus is bound to go and tell them.

are you sure this isn't just some scam to get peoples details?

Someone should tell the Something Awful goons about this. I would, but I don't have an account. I don't think I'll partake in the actual attack though.

You don't have to agree with the KKK, but what they're doing is not illegal. People hate all the time. There's discriminations everywhere, but it's not illegal. I don't know about you, but I haven't received any emails about joining the KKK or supporting it. They don't go out of their way to bother us, so why should we bother them? Because you don't like what they believe in? Well... I don't like emos, but I'm not going to go and attack emo forums and the like.

Yeah, I would steer clear of that whole thing. It's a bad idea to leave tracks across a white supremacist web site that the FBI is most likely sniffing. What can I say, I love a good conspiracy theory.

Anyone wanna organise an emo attack? that would be funny, not like they are gonna do anything about it other than cry a lot and slit their wrists.

Just imagine, even if just one emo took his/her life as a result, you could know you have a made a real difference to the world! think about it

Quote:FOX News

WASHINGTON -- Congress convened in a special emergency session today in an attempt to find answers to the mass suicide of three million American teenagers yesterday. All three million were found at home in their rooms with slit wrists after a successful hacking attempt by unknown vandals destroyed the servers of Rupert Murdoch-owned MySpace.com. Manhunts are in progress in 40 states and several arrests have been made; however, public pressure has now been put on Washington to establish more secure "emo laws," creating a safe haven for children ranging from ages eleven to seventeen to cut themselves and complain about who "broke their lives."

"I just can't believe this happened to me!" one young man said. "MySpace understood me when none of you knew who I was! Now I don't even feel like a person!" President Bush declined to comment, but was heard to have said, "...think he really needs to shut the fuck up."

I was bored.

Anyway, I prefer to make my presence felt by smashing ice cream into a little boy's face.

To hate some 13 year olds who have no fashion sense and think they are cool because they get looks from old people is way different than hating a race people. But you are correct it is not illegal.

I had no doubt that it would have failed. I mean, give me a break. If you're spreading that around to forums, some KKK member or sympathiser is going to be a member of a random forum. It's pretty much common sense there. Of course, whoever decided that it'd be fun to attack the KKK forums obviously wasn't smart enough to think this thoroughly.

What's sad is, they weren't always rascist. If I remember right, it was more or less a political thing in the beginning, but some new guy came along and screwed it up. Now we have to watch these stupid tapes at school everyday telling us how all white people are rascist... thanks alot, KKK.

WikipediaThe Klan's first incarnation was in 1866. Founded by veterans of the Confederate Army, its main purpose was to resist Reconstruction, and it focused as much on intimidating "carpetbaggers" and "scalawags" as on putting down the freed slaves. It quickly adopted violent methods. A rapid reaction set in, with the Klan's leadership disowning it, and Southern elites seeing the Klan as an excuse for federal troops to continue their activities in the South. The organization was in decline from 1868 to 1870, and was destroyed in the early 1870s by President Ulysses S. Grant's vigorous action under the Civil Rights Act of 1871 (also known as the Ku Klux Klan Act).

Racism is actually political and economical discrimination, not personal hatred (bigotry). So yes, it was originally political, but it was still racist. And racism is perpetuated by bigotry, so...
