So we spent a good 3 hours today going through playtesting the current build.

We have quite a bit of data collected and have already started working on the initial bug list and feature modifications.

I will post up some screenies tomorrow.

No. I put that in prior to playtest as a gag

Same as i did for the critical damage point for the mining facility. it was a toilet. I am sure dante has a screenshot of that one.

Web Site

Yeah, i just used the same css for the main site, but both are gonna get an overhaul anyway.

Posted up about 20 some screenies of our Play Test from sunday (You can find them here)

Should get more information up on the site, its late, and im tired.

Have a good one, and enjoy the imagery.

Looks like it's coming along nicely. Still looking for people to help playtest? I need a good reason to play FarCry again.

Quote:You can place no or any amount of "MCT"s, called CriticalPoints, to any building. This means a building can have more than one MCT, no MCT, or more than one building can share the same MCT.

What would be the point of adding a MCT anyway then? Looks like you're just fucking yourself over if you place one.

To keep the same style of gameplay that Renegade has. Depending on the map maker, you can still have one MCT for a building, same as Renegade. But having multiple MCT's allows for different styles of gameplay for maps.

I am nearing completion on brush assembly and VIS and Portal Areas for the interior of what will be our power plant facility. After i complete the brushed interior, and finish adding decorations to give it atmosphere i will post some screenshots.

Expect that within the next few days.

I have FarCry, but my computer can barely run singleplayer on the lowest details, so I am guessing that it will be even worse in multiplayer.

Well, actually, maybe not. On my old computer I had Aliens VS Predator 2 and singeplayer lagged badly, but multiplayer did not lag at all, so I hope that will be the case with this mod if I ever try it.

just a note, once we finish 2 maps (i know, not a lot) i plan on releasing the beta publicly to start tracking bugs down.

from there we will release the other 3 plan maps, guides on how to setup maps, as well as fix any issues we have from there on out.

i am looking at wanting to release something in the august time frame, but don't quote me.

You wouldn't be able to run FarCry at MAX settings, but you would certainly be able to run on high settings.

Note: The props and decorations are still incomplete. I have yet to add misc items to make the place look used.

Also note that the last shot in the list is the actual generators inside the power plant (bad shot, i know). These also serve as the critical damage point.

It is more of an industrial/office building equipped with generators than a full fledged nuclear reactor. But that fits within the farcry world.

Without further ado:

Just got another level designer, he is starting preliminary work on a day map. will get screens posted when it becomes interestign to look at.

-Tim- is his name btw...

Also, i run a 9800XT with 2g Ram, and a P4 3.2 with FarCry on max settings.

I'd just like to take this moment to thank all the warm responses and positive feedback you lot have shown us in this topic! It's very refreshing for us slaves.

In all seriousness, I feel it is comforting to bring up the fact that most of the team behind this project have enjoyed C&C Renegade and the resourcefulness of the CNC gamerules for quite some time. We know what worked, we know what could stand some improvement, and we know what additions to make as we move closer towards what I call "CNCV2."

This is a C&C community-driven project; I'd love to see a constant flow of feedback and opinions being direct at our designated forum section located at <http://renevo.com/?showforum=85>. Be sure to keep checking in our our Wiki section (<http://staff.dead6.net/wiki/index.php?n=Cncfc.Codedoc>) where we keep an up-to-date listing of all the features and content that make up the core of C&C FarCry and, upon release, an in-depth review of all the source files (entirely encased in Lua script files meaning you only need Notepad to alter the code) for your modding delight.

It's going to be fun.

I will repost what i stated perviously so you do not have to look for it help-linux:

We are trying to use as much in-game content from farcry as possible.

We are creating a couple of vehicles, and possibly weapons to supplement farcry's existing model library, however, those are still in progress.

---

Our goal is to add CnC style gameplay to an existing game, not create a total conversion.

Thanks for your enthusiasm!

EDIT: for anyone interested, farcry is now available for 9.99:

We are still cooking, we just finished up the majority for the scripting with much thanks to vlotboky for the nice work.

We are still trying to put together the buildings, the power plant has been finished, and the mining facility is under work while i spend some time tweaking out the GUI and -Tim- works on Valley Day.

Also, lest not forget Dan is recovering from a recent surgery, and should be getting the additional vehicle UVW wrapped so that we can get it textured and rigged for game use.

While i am tweaking around with the GUI, i will probably post some screenshots in our media section, so keep an eye out!

We are nearing our first major internal alpha test milestone. We hope to hold extensive testing near the end of August, or perhaps in early September.

As such, we are currently looking to build a small internal testing team. The number will be from 10-20 people. In order to be a tester, you need to have attention to detail. And of course, you need to own a valid copy of FarCry.

If you don't have FarCry, but would like a chance to be a tester, FarCry is now available for only 9.99 from direct2drive.com.

If you are interested in joining our testing team, please email castus AT gmail DOT com with your contact information, and anything else you might feel usefull.
