It's now twice as deep.

The pictures don't do it justice. It's probably nothing to some of you but we hardly ever get snow. It's a fantastic sight.

Seems years since we had proper snow... if you want drizzle and slush, you're fine of course...

That was earlier. It's twice as thick, if not more.

My dad has had to stay in a hotel overnight. It took him an hour to go 7 miles.

My sister couldn't even drive back into our village so she's stayed over at a friend's house.

It's not minor.

[Begin rant]

To those ignorant people on about canadians:

We dont carry tire chains, or snow shovels on us at all times.
Thats just stupid. No one even puts them on.
They're called, SNOW tires. And a normal shovel works just fine.
We're not all woodworkers, in fact, I think thats just plain rude to assume that all we do up here is lumberjack.
We do have something called SUMMERS where I'll guarantee it gets ALMOST as hot as Nevada someday.

Dont beleive me?

We can sometimes get to 44 C with the Humidex Factor.
Nevada is desert....so dry heat....they are above 100 F yes..
Sometimes they get to 110.
But 44 is like 122 if I'm not mistaken.

And Snow around here lately is uncommon.

The last three winters have been shit, barely any snow. And the day that it did come, it was insignificant, and melted within a week.

Another thing: Did you know lower BC and Vancouver Island RARELY see a significant snowfall? Toronto/Lower Ontario gets bad snowstorms, yes, but thats only once every few years nowadays. Ice storms, are a different story Ottawa and Kingston get bad snowstorms.

Dont think that just because we are "northerners" That we dont have a life. And see nothing but snow.

Within a month or two the snow will be gone, then here comes the green grass and tons of rain.

[/rant]

Dont start a flame war with me. Im not up for it.

Im not meaning to put anyone down, it just bothers me when people have no fucking clue what goes on up here.

Liverpool had a nice sight of snow, When Mero came online I'm like "Looked out your window? :D:D!" Same for gamemodding.

Tho, For some reason when it snows all the local ass-hats get up to no good, they fucking took the back window wiper of my brothers new car. :bastards:

I like snow for the sight and plus we hardly get it, But it causes to much trouble.

Ya, us canadians know our snow. I have to walk thro a good 30cm thro it just to get out of my garage. Suthern Ontaria got so much, as a result of that happened in nothern NY state, where they got 9 feet (in some area's,according to cnn)

To put this situation into perspective... The first and only snowbank I've gotten stuck in this year was 2 feet high and 10 metres long. The last 2 feet believe it or not was what got me because right at the end it went up another foot so I was going through 3 feet of snow. 20 mins later I was out and levelling more snowbanks throughout the streets.

Oh ya, that was with a dodge caravan... You guys get snowdays over 2-3 inches... WOW

I might take a short drive to the place where I had gotten stuck. The graders have come through

now. The snowbanks on each side of the road are well over 2m tall. They've already come through once this year with the large snowblowers and blown the snow into large gravel trucks to be hauled away.

Must be nice to see snow if you rarely get it. This year we got 2-3feet of snow, depending on the area in London (ontario). All the snow fell within 17 hours and we got over a foot in just 3. Seeing stuff like this was normal that day, t'was interesting.

Who says that my comment was directed at Canadians. I did say shovel and not 'snow shovel' and while you use snow spike tyres some europeans choose to use tyre chains. A british invention. And no they are not stupid and they do work. Take a joke.

here in edmonton its quite a show aswell, my friend has so much snow in his back yard he now snowboards off his garage roof lol.

unfortunately my camera is busted atm, but im sure we will get even more soon, so no worries i will post pics sooner or later. but just to give an estimate in my back yard i got about 3-4 feet of snow.

Oh I know Barrie got dumped on. The thing is with lake effect here is how much 10km east or west can make a difference. I live on the west side of london, downtown is about 10km away and there was almost 1 foot more snow there than here, go 20km west on the 402 to strathroy and there was hardly a dusting lol.

I live in cincinnati. We only got a few inches of snow but what we got worse was several inchs of ice. Tuesday night it poured freezing rain all night then froze solid next day. Took me over an hour to de-ice my car lol.

Give me snow to drive in any day, beats this crap.

I heard upstate NY got 14' of snow this past week.
