Okay so just two minutes ago I was on my new computer, and I was using the Internet. The only thing I ever use the Internet for on that computer is updating the system through Windows Upadate. Then Norton pops up and says something like "you computer is being attacked by a rapidly spreading threat." So I check it and it is a virus call "Trojan.Peacomm" and my computer was not protected against it, because Norton's subscription had expired.
Now I have the problem under control, but my question is can this virus travel in flash drives (even If a program has not been accessed on the drive can it spread off of it).

Sure, any device that can store data will hold anything you tell it to, or in this case, anything the attacker tells it to.

Format?

Subject: Re: Trojan.Peacomm

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

There's no need for a format if it is one virus that causes no damage or minor damage. Especially if its a Trojan, most virus scanners do well at picking them up.

Subject: Re: Trojan.Peacomm

Norton will pick it up but it won't do anything.
I Require full performance one my new computer for Renhalo purposes, it was not a full format just a system drivers format.
But on my older computers I will usually take the time to find the virus executable files myself and delete them.

You're annoying as hell. Before hitting the button that you ultimately see as "sibmit ripplai", contemplate to yourself whether you really have something useful to contribute.

As for the problem at hand:
Merovingian is correct I believe. Have you tried using AVG from Grisoft? It's free. Although it may not have helped you in this case unless your autoscan was on, it's still a handy little Virus scanner. On that note, please let me know if anyone has had better experiences with another virus scanner. At the moment AVG is fine, but I like to keep my options open.

I know it may not be what you want to hear but there are some good Anti virus out there for free. AVG has been mentioned, so what about Zone Alarm?

My subscription to Norton was never re-newed because of what has happened with you. Why have an Anti-virus programme if it will not heal a trojan?

AVG and ZA run side by side on my PC and there have been np problems in 3 years.

Try them out, all for the sake of 10 minutes.

Avast! is a good antivirus, although you can't leave it to scan all night because if it finds something it needs user input to continue scanning.

Also, if you're behind a NAT or router there is a fair chance that this has spread to other machines through ethernet, weather your systems are networked or not.

^^ What he said. Plus you can't use just any 'serial' with NOD32. You MUST pay for it to get virus definition/software updates. It's only 49.99 per year, and it's well worth every cent.

Yes, and 2+2=4.
We all know that Warez is pirating software, but I also know that if we type Warez correctly spelled enough we will pop up on the first page of google when ever people are looking for their CD hacks, and other cheats. We don't need any more cheaters than there are already posting on these forums (Notice how I made the "W" on Warez four symbols VV).

No. AVG is an antivirus program. ZoneAlarm is not; it's firewall software. Sure, you can get the ZoneAlarm Suite that probably has antivirus built in, but it's not free.

As for providing a link, Frenchman was correct to say that an average user could use Google or another search portal. The first result in Google for "NOD32" is the exact official site for NOD32. To add to your laziness, here's a link: Click.

OMFG!!!

I tell someone to use Zone Alarm as an anti virus and now I am accused of being a cheat?

How do you come to that conclusion?

Once again I come across the fountain of knowledge.

You state "We all know", well I am sorry to inform you that I still do not have a clue what you are talking about, nor do I have any wish to comprehend what your symbols mean.

What I sincerely tried and intended was to give someone that had problems with his PC, a possible solution to remedy the matter.

However, as has, come to be expected from a certain few people, every post becomes a target to flame people as they give assistance, even if it is "in your eyes" bad assistance.

I wonder why people are brave enough to attempt to give aid on this forum, but then again, I wonder what "kicks" people like you actually get from flaming those same players that offer help only to be called cheats.

ps. Notice that my post has never mentioned anything about any cheats, but, if you are correct!!!

Then you have just directed the cheats on an easier way to cheat using YOUR symbols.

NOW! Is flaming me a cover story for YOU to tell all your buddies how to cheat or are you just being pathetic and paranoid because someone uses Zone Alarm to keep his PC clean?

EHHHHH!!! Once again I am missing some important point!!!

I have never asked on this topic for a link to Nod32. If you try to read back a few posts then you will clearly see what I asked for and it certainly was not "Laziness" that prompted it.

If you take time to read the whole topic then you will notice that I HAD found and used Nod32, for the trial period, but then again maybe you are directing your thoughts at someone else.

Can we please get back on topic and help the creator of this topic to fix his PC?

No, wait just a minute. I never knew this topic was directed entirely towards you. This was a topic created by Jerad and his computer problems. We were 'flaming' him because of his lazyness of not being bothered to look around the web for what he needs.

The reply Jerad gave towards Dave was not towards you. As Jerad had stated, "Oh I didn't see that someone asked. I thought you were just pointing something out.", Meaning he missed your request of what warez is.

The same goes to cmatts post, "As for providing a link, Frenchman was correct to say that an average user could use Google or another search portal. The first result in Google for "NOD32" is the exact official site for NOD32. To add to your laziness, here's a link: Click.", that also was not directed towards you. If anyhting it was pointing out Jerads lazyness and lack of self commital. This post of his was directed towards Jerad.

If anything i would stop posting in this topic if i were you until you realize that the posts and comments are not directed towards you but towards the topic starter who we have a problem with because he's too lazy.

As for all the people that called me lazy, maybe you should stop being lazy and read my the entire topic, I did say that it was already under control in the topic.

The question was if a virus could get onto a flash drive, and execute itself upon the flash drive being attached to the computer, even if no files on the flash drive were opened or even the drive opened in explorer.

I know that they can attach themselves to files and the when the file is opened/executed the virus starts running, but could the virus start itself up from a flash drive was the actual question.
