Was just at wal*mart, they unwrapped a pallet of them and only five people were there to take them. At the mall next door people were dressed up like a bunch of faggots. I like the book but fucking seriously, what are you a bunch of fucking trekies.

Sams club has at least a thousand copies. So pretty much all the people who wanted to go to their little trendy book stores and wear costumes could have very easily got a good nights rest and went and bought a copy no trouble at any major retailer. They STILL would have gotten their copy first too. There were people still in line this morning that hadn't gotten their copy after many large stores were already open.

I read the first two in like, grade 5. Then I read the third one. After looking at the size of the books after number 3, I just stopped there.

I don't really read novels anymore.

I got it about 6pm, up to about page 340 in about 2 and a half hours of non-stop reading, currently taking a break to rest my eyes. Enjoying it so far, the books are MUCH better than their film counterparts...

WHY????

Are your parents of simple mind? There are worse books out there than the Harry Potter series.

Perhaps they did not want your young mind corrupted with sorcery and witchcraft.

No, my parents are just very religious. Maybe they thought I will go buy magic wands and turn my baby brother into a babyfrog...or fly off in a Nimbus 2000. Anyway that was many years ago.

Those who think these books have a negative impact on its readers must be seriously screwed up in the head.

Yeah I'm sure that there are people wanting to go over there but let me knock it up to "If I gave you a million dollars, what would you do?"

I would be interested to see how many of those people who would say "I'm going to help finance the war in Iraq!" or that they would pay their own way over there. My point being that they may want to go over there but it's not their dream.

I enjoyed the Deathly Hallows book, finished it last night. Thought the ending was great, although I am sure when they come to make the film version they will cut out all the best parts as usual, and leave you with a tangled and twisted mess with half the plot missing.

Just back from the movies. the kids went to see the Simpsons and i went in to see "Order of the Phoenix".

Simply awesome, especially when you associate the faces with the characters in the book.

Luna is so simple and sexy looking with her wide doe eyes and lovely, flowing, blonde hair. That accent is so mind melting.

Tonks on the other hand, is a rough tough babe, built for action.

Ginny!! Now 2 years time and she would get it it big time
