Cut down to 75% size. We really should have started with some good old fashioned thumbnails but meh.

Quick question to both Oblivion, and Jeep Rubicon:

What programs are you guys using for your XP themes? I tried one, and it was real clunky, and took up a chunk of memory. Could you recommend one?

StyleXP.

It costs monies though.

Mine, due to having more desktop icons then I have space, I've decided to put them all in a folder that is placed on my desktop instead.

The ones that are left on my desktop are ones that am using daily.

The left screen is my laptop, it's synchronised using synergy.

The other 2 are my desktop, running dual monitors. The theme is Metalic Shades and the stats are from Samurize.

Wallpapers left->right: Found on deviantart, photo by a friend of mine, graphics art work by another friend.

What happened to keeping the resolution to a maximum of 1280x1024?

Not much has changed since the last thread:

I use tune up utilities 2007, as it includes a themes customization feature. It also costs $ but if anyone wants it I can "get" you a copy if you contact me over MSN.

I use a modified file in my windows map (Dunno where) but some Patcher modified a file, so now my XP can run any themes, even fan made, It allows the same stuff as StyleXP, only no 'side-programs' like sidebars and stuff.

It's called UXTheme Patch, and I use it too.

Note: It's a violation of your EULA to use the patch, if you're worried about the kinda stuff, then don't install it.
