and save it as a new map, Hourglass_2 or something

I want to make two changes. Firstly, an overhang near the hill, kinda like this. excuse the mspaint
<http://img.photobucket.com/albums/v284/MaidenTy1/hourglassTT1.jpg>
<http://img.photobucket.com/albums/v284/MaidenTy1/hourglassTT2.jpg>

the intended result:

- arty or mrls on the hill can shoot over the overhang and hit the refineries
- no other hillcamping is possible
- players on the hill can't see the enemy WF and Airstrip so you can't see every tank rush they're planning
- if vehicles rush over the hill, they will be shielded from defences until they pass the blue line here:

<http://img.photobucket.com/albums/v284/MaidenTy1/hourglassTT3.jpg>
<http://img.photobucket.com/albums/v284/MaidenTy1/hourglassTT4.jpg>

that's the main change. the second is less important and relates to the Nod Turret in front of the Hand. right now it's useless - if GDI had a med tank shooting the obelisk from the Hand side, the turret can't see it since there's a rock in the way. so either cut away the rocky part, or move the turret closer to the tiberium.

thanks.

by the way, don't worry AT ALL about making it look good - a black solid wall in mid-air is perfectly sufficient for me, as long as it blocks vision and shots. I just want to test it gameplay-wise.

You would be better off just using script and creating a Script_Zone it has to be done in leveledit, not renx (unless you want to add textures to the whole map manually again)

Not true.

W3D retains all material and texture settings. You just need to put the textures where the file wants you to put them.

Mapname.W3d = Terrain of the map, He can add whatever he wants.

Something like this spoony? I will need a little more direction on where to place the walls.

basically an overhang shaped like this, seeing it from halfway up the hill:

however, it horizontally covers the entire hill, so it'd be immediately above the technician's head too

From the hill, an arty or MRLS could be able to see (and shoot) the top of the refinery:

but no other hillcamping is possible.
Tanks can drive under the overhang.

how it'd roughly look from your own base

Why do you want to destroy a westwood made map of ownage?

Then how will the vechs roll into the base if it gets covered up by walls?

it'd be better if there were some point going anywhere except the hill.

BEAT IT JUST BEAT IT!

I will do it for you it is so easy. I could put two ramps together so that they form like an outcropping hill but then vechs would already have a hard time going over it because of the high incline.

YES, actually I will play with is some a bit later.

Here are two modified files for copying into the DATA dir. Basically it blocks shooting at the ref.

I wanted to give you an example how it can look like and yes -I read your post. I have very limited skills at LE yet, but I thought it can be done in this direction.

The criterias were:

No HC anymore. The highest points in the enemy base are the ref towers. The Sydney wall was used for the corepatch-modified maps (Complex, Snow etc) in the same way.

Inf should not be able to go uphill to spot enemy rush preparations. I agree, I only made this half-way reliable. For this, only the Tiberium field should be free to walk/drive on. Infantry (except Mutants & Chemos) would die when reaching the top then.

And for the third, making rushes invincible in certain areas, this is moronism IMHO. Thinking of the range an AGT or an Obelisk has on every map -where is the goal in shorten it in a small map like Hourglass?An BTW, tanks will only get shot when they are crossing the edge at the enemy downhill gradient.

Nevertheless, the best solution would be a totally foggy hilltop. But then you have to enforce players with bhs.dll only.
