Absolutely amazing discovery; I love snakes and this is basically the dinosaur of all snakes. Truly in the past, practically everything was huge it seems.

The discovery has also shed more light on temperature conditions millions of years ago and answers several questions regarding the evolution of snakes.

This giant snake has been named Titanoboa cerrejonensis and was discovered in Columbia within a coal mine.

Pretty neat, huh?

Wow, you see giant snakes in fictions like Harry Potter and such but it looks like snakes that size did really exist.

they built a life-size replica of this monster for the Smithsonian museum.

Omg it's teh Basilisk!!!

That is pretty wicked though. I wonder what they discover next.
Also, that replica is awesome
