Friends having mp3 issues. It will not connect to a computer (plug USB to computer but does not connect to the computer through it) And he has lost quite a few songs and on occasion still losing them. The only reason i care is he said "if you can fix it ill let you keep it." So im curios what the hell is happening and if its repairable.

Probably wont last much longer even if repaired but i feel like learning a bit.

What kind of mp3 player is it?

How exactly is he trying to connect it to a computer?

I'm having a hard time understanding your post, sorry...

no problem im bad at describing things hes trying to connect the mp3 to the computer through a usb cord to add more music on it. It is not detected on the computer. the mp3 acts like it normally would when connected to a computer.

the model is this:

Sandisk Salsa Clip.. not familiar with that one.

Since I don't physically have it, I had to settle with googling around.

If your problem is connecting to the computer and putting mp3's on it, this guy's post might help:

I have no idea why the player would be losing songs, though.

So it's working? Awesome!

BTW, if a song's format isn't the right one for the player, you can probably convert it to the right one (mp3).
