What's the point of health bar on the HUD? You can just press a button and get the same thing.

You can also just press k...

This is not the topic to discuss this really... but anyway;

Building bars are on the screen all the time, you INSTANTLY see if a building gets damaged, even if you are busy fighting someone.

Pressing K is not something you do every 0.1 seconds and you can't easily do it if your busy fighting against someone, hence your must LESS likely to see that a building is taking damage within 1 second of the enemy setting foot in that building. Therefore, it IS a huge advantage.

And now a moderator will probably move the previous 4 posts (this one included) into a separate thread since this is heading off topic.

you can easily press k once or twice a second even during a fight for a split second. Its not much of an advantage

Exactly, if you lose a fight due to pressing "k" a few times you obviously suck at this game lol.

You forgot Danpaul: the only reason people use it is because it looks so good! It's a real example of graphical plus value to have those things standing in your screen! It's absolutely not because it gives them an advantage! Topic split, as was to be expected.

The 'advantage' of building bars is barely an advantage at all. It doesn't help you win and it doesn't make the game easier for you.

It's also debatable that the health dropping is noticeable instantly.

The fact is, regardless of how sure anyone is, there is no possible way (i.e. it's impossible) to tell whether or not it is an advantage or not. This is because everyone plays and perceives information differently.

For me, I would not consider using it as an advantage. This is because I barely notice when my own health is flashing red because I'm about to die let alone a building's health bar that is 5x smaller than my own health bar. I'm also willing to bet that even if I did use building bars I would still use K because it is a hard habit to break. In Renegade X, the 'K' menu updates in real time so you don't have to constantly tap the button to refresh it. However I always find myself tapping away at it regardless.

To me, noticing when a building's health bar drops on my HUD would be like driving a car and noticing when the minutes change on the digital clock on the radio. It's not very attention grabbing and it's not a very pressing issue.

However, I don't know how other people use their HUD, so I cannot say for certain that it would not be an advantage for other people.

However, if you want my overall opinion on the matter, then I believe that building bars just aren't an important enough issue to change the game in favor of anyone else. If you think otherwise, then you're just being ignorant. It just isn't a very big deal and therefore doesn't have an effect on the gameplay.

People think that they will totally tarnish and ruin the game's integrity, but they are ill-informed and jumping to conclusions. It's like taking a single grain of sand and tossing it onto a white piece of paper and therefore declaring the paper dirty.

People who are heart set on it being an advantage need to perform an experiment. Play a game of Renegade normally, record your score and whatnot. Then install some building bars and play in similar conditions. Compare your results and see if you really did drastically improve your game. Chances are, you did no better or no worse (within a set margin of human error, of course). I would also be willing to bet that you barely used the information provided by the building bars on your HUD either.

One thing, you are saying you use buildingbars. (asin installed)

Yet you do not use it? (It is in your game but you dont look at it?)
I fail to see logic in that.

Changing the skin of a mammoth tank to pure white wont change any score and wont change a thing ingame yet by most its seen as an advantage. I personally apply this logic likewise to the buildingbars.

(FYI I dont use skins like this or buildingbars,clearscope etc)

Using your logic I can apply this to any 'veh'skin (inf is a different story). Hench I can even apply this to clearscope.

So if I'm right according to you -> Buildingbars, vehicleskins, Clearscope and what not arent advantages?

In my eyes buildingbars is an advantage yet the player can choose to use it yes or no.
Every one can download buildingbars so it's not a 'locked' advantage skin.
So yes it is an advantage.
Do I care that it is? NO

No, I don't have it installed and I never had had it installed. And no, you're wrong. Not only did you misapplied my "logic," but your own logic doesn't make any sense.

Your application of the word advantage is incorrect. Something can't be an advantage if nothing is gained to aid the user. So people might say a pure white mammoth tank skin is an advantage but it does not make them right. If nothing is gained, then it is merely a change in design. Nothing more, nothing less.

To have an advantage is to cheat. And to cheat, you use resources and information and whatnot that is not available to other players. Since everyone has the information about building health available to them already by default, it is not a question of having more information than anyone else in the game.

You CAN'T say it is an advantage. But you CAN'T say it isn't either. Everyone reads their HUD and perceives the information differently. I don't care what you or anyone else says. There is absolutely no grounds to say that it is an advantage and there is absolutely no grounds to say that it isn't.

The building bars aren't about making the game easier to play. Nor are they there to 'make the HUD look cool' (although some might protest to that). They are there to let you do something that's already possible in the game another way. That is why it is not an argument about whether or not it is an advantage, it's an argument of whether or not it can or can't effect the game's flow, regardless of in who's favor.

Edit: Bolded for emphasis.

Come now Gozy. If you have the ability to see your exact team's location. You wouldn't use that advantage? It's not like I use it ingame, hell its too annoying to have on while im pwning. Only use it to find where people are on my team, as I said good for finding afkz/cheaters.

AFK are dead easy to find.

If you go AFK on the field, you wind up dead 99.999999% of the time. This leads to:

If you go AFK in base, you probably do so inside a building, thus:

Search all building interiors for people not moving, PM them (depending on server policy) and then Qkick if they don't respond.

And I achieved this using... my brain, and a keyboard.

Okay.

Let's say your in a sniper server for instance.

One of the server rules is 'no basing' , you've jus been killed and the other team are complaining that a guy is basing and spawnkilling them. You run up there to see if there telling the truth, but the guy runs back to the tunnels and is like hi. Now, if I use map overlay, I can see his/her exact position and cmd kill them and warn them.

Jus an example of its many uses.

better solution would be to isolate shaders.dll so it can't gain access to building health information in the first place, since that sort of information is NOT something that dll file needs anyway.
