Well, actually, Osama rebelled after he felt the US used him. After the Sojvets where removed from Afghanistan the US dropped all and any support for Osama.

Wouldn't really surprise me if Osama isn't really dead. Or rather, that he wasn't killed by US troops last night. He might be dead in ditch somewhere from years ago, but not two days ago. Why would they drop his body into the ocean before anyone could identify it?

Muslim beliefs say something about water as an alternative to a ground burial, and something about they like dead to be burried fast. Or at least that is how I heard it. Never looked far into Muslim beliefs myself...

It does seem rather convenient though that they killed him and dropped his body in the depths of the ocean within hours...

I'm not one to follow conspiracy theories, but everyone has to wonder what the whole truth is.

Edit: Also they say they had his DNA on file from years back, and it matches the man they killed in the fortified mansion.

While that may be true, it is likely to presume that he was killed or found dead in Obama's period in the white house. Because of the very very simple reason that IF he was killed/captured/found during the Bush administration, Bush would've been the first to let us know. I mean, that would've helped the republicans a lot during the elections and helped tremendously with justifying the 2 wars the USA is in today...

You make a good point. But, there are facts (by truthers and conspiracy-theorists, so actually "believing" these could prove false anyway) that says that Bin Laden has been dead for years now, even worked for the CIA, or had some "affiliation" with it. There are some facts/theories/subjects that say that Bin Laden even worked with the Bush family. Though, getting into a political debate about how corrupt our government is isn't exactly good on renforums xD

In my opinion, people give the government too much credit.

To say that Osama Bin Laden had ever been working with the US... the implications would be massive... and what possible advantage would the US gain by this?

Saying something like Osama has been dead for years sounds more reasonable. However, it would be a huge risk for Obama to blatantly lie about Bin Laden being killed, imagine what would happen if people found out. He's become President of "the most powerful country in the world" so I'd (hope) he'd be a little smarter than that.

Like I said, I could spill out numerous facts/theories about many things that go on in our(US) government. But, there is quite a bit to gain (power, money, etc) from "working" with him. But, there are more "powerful" things in this world than the American government.

Religion started this whole thing, I hope he shuts his big mouth and keeps out of it. I would call this actually a quite humane thing to say. We as the free world advocate freedom and civil rights. Who are we if we cannot live by those rules laid down by ourself and our believes?

It's a pity the USA soldiers played judge jury and executioner, even more so if he was indeed unarmed. I would have wanted Osama to see court, so the hatebeards would see how we even treat our most hated enemies.

Pretty darn civilized, even though we do kill them (as painless as possible even) in the end.

With this action the USA is not better than a lot of murderers and arguably not much better than terrorists either.

To be clear, I don't like religion, at least not in it's current and past form, but in this case it's not as much about religion as it is about common sense and humanity.

Sick of hearing all the "he died un-armed". Do you think everyone in the twin-towers were armed? All those people wanted nothing to do with Osama, or any of those eastern terrorists. They were simply going to work and an extremely evil person orchestrated their death. This is an act of war, and not something that is justified in the courtroom. If we kept him alive and brought him over here for a court hearing, it would not fuel Al Queda any more or less. They would probably kill someone every day he isn't released.

Those people are sick, and want all you on this forum dead. I'm surprised any of you would expect these people a fair-trial when they would shoot you in the head the first chance they got.

There, that's about right.

I do have to agree, though. Mass celebrating of a person's death is just ridiculous. That, basically, makes us just like them...I'm a firm believer that the 9/11 attack's weren't just terrorist attacks, there was "ALOT" more to them other than Osama bombing the buildings. Too much evidence for it to just be that.

I'm not saying that I don't have sorrow for all of the people that died that day, because I do. I actually know people whose families were affected by 9/11. That's why it pains me to even think that our government had anything to do with the attacks.

But, this is another instance to be discussed on another topic.

Stay classy, America.

typical fat, dumb americans
Go f yourself.

We are celebrating the death of a mentally insane mass-murderer who justifies killing innocent people, not just americans, under the category of religion.

I had family almost killed in 9/11, 1 got out of the trade center just in time, and the other 2 got out of the buildings near the pentagon as soon as they got wind of the first attacks.

Exactly. The events of 9/11/01 affected all of us Americans in ways that foreigners simply can't understand.

I'm glad you got out of the WTC. I was over in Arizona just watching on the news. My sister was an EMT in upstate New York and she went down with some friends to help dig for survivors that evening. We were pretty scared for her. It seems a lot of people here were either affected or are close to someone who was.

I wish Bin Laden could have been arrested and stood trial for what he did but I also realize it's completely not feasible. First of all, it was possible that there were traps or unknown weapons that could have hurt or killed our men when they raided his hut, and if they did arrest him and bring him to Gitmo or something, then there could have been massive and unknown consequences and risk for Americans and our allies. Hijackings, bombings, etc... to persuade us to release him.

But no, I'm not celebrating in the streets or hosting "Osama is dead" parties, and I know that his death doesn't mean the end of Al Qaeda or radical Islamic terrorism, (or any religion-based terrorism for that matter) but the world is definitely just the slightest bit better with him dead. That much is for sure.

Quote:I like how he labeled Osama the Hitler of the 21st century. As if he is comparable to Hitler by any stretch of the imagination.

actually, both osama and saddam are comparable to hitler, but in slightly different ways. the only way in which they are not comparable to hitler is neither of them are anywhere near as powerful as nazi germany was at the time. saddam was equally mentally deranged as hitler was (towards the end anyway), and osama's level of murderous loathing towards quite a lot of other religions was on hitler's level towards the jews.

Quote:celebrating his death will just piss them off more and provoke more problems i made a point on a different forum that if anything is a genuine insult about the osama death situation, it is giving him an islamic funeral.

osama bin laden was hands-down the worst enemy of muslims all over the world. and i mean that quite literally. i don't mean some indirect way of making people suspicious of muslims; i refer directly to osama's ideology and method. osama had a murderous loathing of quite a lot of other religions - hindus, jews, christians, atheists - but the one demographic he despised above all other was non-orthodox muslims. if you were a shia muslim, osama and his cronies consider you fit for death. i'm going to repeat that for mudkips' benefit cos i think he doesn't know the faintest thing about osama: if you're the wrong kind of muslim, osama wants you dead. (forgive the present tense, don't look into that) if you're the "right" kind of muslim (sunni), then osama is content to slaughter as many shia as possible to incite a counterattack against you, in which case you have to join al-quada. and that, mudkips, is what's been happening in iraq for the last decade. no, bush is not directly responsible for the deaths of all the muslims in iraq; bin laden and zarqawi were.

bush was at pains to say that america was not at war with islam. ask bin laden if he's at war with "heretical islam" and his answer would be very enthusiastic.

Quote:I do have to agree, though. Mass celebrating of a person's death is just ridiculous. That, basically, makes us just like them...

when was the last time you heard an american seriously say that being a muslim meant you were fit to die?

osama said all the time that just being a particular religion (including and especially the wrong kind of muslim, as i said above) meant you will be and deserve to be killed. no, being happy about a mass-murdering genocidal megalomaniac's death does not make you the same as him, what the fuck are you smoking if you think it does? where on earth are your priorities?

After I watched it I am almost certain that 9/11 was a huge conspiracy thought up by the american government anyway.

An eye for an eye (or at least some form of that) is in the first testament but the second states to turn the other cheek and let god handle it

It's turn the other cheek....UNTIL a mass murderer is trying to kill your family.. then its defend your self and don't let people walk all over you...

The bible is not meant to be interpreted literally, in most instances. (You can't get away from the fact it blatantly says Gays and Whores can't get into heaven.)

you only say it isn't meant to be taken literally because literally it's extremely bad advice.

the turn the other cheek business, don't resist evil, is horrible policy when you're up against the likes of bin laden. it's worse than horrible, it's criminal negligence.

Celebrating his death merely provides peace to the fallen. It does nothing to help preserve the lives of the people for the future.

Honestly? Celebrating his death might seem a little morbid, but it basically gives a message of "If you fuck with us, we will hunt you down, kill you, and then celebrate it."

Besides, men might be created equal, but their actions can easily tip that balance. Personally, I don't feel anyone "deserves" any treatment (good or bad- so saying he "deserved death" is kind of stupid), but I don't think it was wrong to kill him and celebrate his death.

I don;t remember why i threw the second part on but i was saying the bibles first testament states an eye for an eye and the bibles second testament states turn the other cheek. Does this leave room for self interpretation? of course clearly in the society we have today turn the other cheek is suggested but eye for an eye is enforced. what to go with?
