What would be the reason of doing this anyway?

Quote:special Tags
Does anyone really care?

Quote:Webspace
You can get that at quite a few places already for free and probably more than you're giving.

Quote:Emails
Everyone can get a gazillion email addresses nowadays.

Quote:and more
Anything actually money worthy?
Not to be a dick but I really don't see the use

EDIT: Just noticed that details are shown when you click the package on the linked site.
Selling moderation. That oughta introduce some interesting moderators

While you could use the excuse "I could just remove the problem mods," many players leave when they see one problem mod. And the reputation garnered can also hurt the servers.

Just think of this scenario:

Quote:
BF3Guy: Oh Cool! I just found this server managed by the Multiplayer Forums. I should go play!
Maybe I will become a mod! Because I always follow the rules!

GD!girl64: You can become a mod right now! Just donate $20!

BF3Guy: WHAT? I want to become a mod because I earned it, not because some guy with a credit card donated money. I'm going to tell my friends not to go to the server, and I will play somewhere else.

I doubt that, considering since it's been online it's had more than yours.
