I've been getting ready to format my computer, and while I was going through my old files I found some pictures I had edited a few years ago.

Either way, enjoy the pictures which capture the greatness of the game at its core.

(Yes that's a Nod harvester in Gdi base)

I've made my share of drawing based C&C bases.

Nice drawings liquid, i really like the base layouts you drew, those would be awesome if we had a few maps with 3 power plants and just all that extra detail inside the bases. Amazing how much time you must have put into perfecting your drawings, so many of the same thing, but better every time.

Was wondering what the Cockroach was supposed to be? What are those long arms protruding from it? Very interesting concepts all in all, and it's kinda sad you didn't put these up long ago for map makers to get ideas from

The second last and very last drawings are the best, i would love to try making those map, but at this rate we would be lucky to get 20 players on it, and it looks like it would be much better with 50+.

i don't think i had Renegade in mind at all when i drew any of them the Cockroach is essentially a roided-out version of the Tick Tank the armor would be a shiny super dense metal, it would have dual cannons, and it would launch rockets out of the "shoulders", which is what i'm thinking you saw as arms the Beast or Arachnid thing would be a 4-legged Titan with a crazy machine gun that's basically anti-infantry / AA, while the Goliath was like a rocket Titan the Nod Scorpion thing looks like an actual scorpion, but the tail is a mobile Obelisk and the claws are the rocket launchers (and the very front has a flame thrower on it) the little side scorpion "legs" were meant to divert rockets away like the ECM tank does in Generals (this was before they actually made Generals)

i also had another scorpion-looking thing that would have been like the ICBM (or the SCUD launcher that came out in Generals later on)

i hold on to the hope that someday EA will release the C&C franchise from its vile, unimaginative clutches and give it back to Petroglyph or a studio that could make a proper Tiberian Sun II game and bring everything back to life nice drawings liquid. Makes me remember those boring classes back in the school days.

I have only two C&C related drawings in my long-abandoned sketchbook which I still keep around! enjoy!!

mega failure of my HON drawing attempt!

comparing the real-life arty vs Rene arty!

not telling how I drew these until I feel like it!
