Despite the fact that it was apparently a chance to play the original C&C as one of the little guys and not a commander... the previews I'd read in various magazines for a couple of years.

I bought Renegade because I am a DIE HARD C&C fan! I fell in love with the C&C titles since the very first C&C came out. Remember the good old commando and the nod flame tanks? I wasn't too impressed at all with Tiberian Sun when it came out, fealt like it was just a sloppy addition with little originality, just new units that did very little for gameplay. However when Renegade came out I emmediatly went out and bought it. I thought, this is where C&C needs to go! No doubt, I am also a big fps fan.

Majiin Vegetasaw it in a mag about 5 yrs ago.

Time sometimes really seems to fly. Anyway's I bought it because:

A: to make the collection complete

B: I liked the concept of being in a big C&C war with all the units and vehicles.

Although Renegade has it's problem there is still nothing else out there for me that is better.

Edit: woh I didn't know I never posted here before.

Lol, You are exaggerating a wee bit too much, there is no way you could have seen anything about Renegade 7 years ago. Tiberian Dawn came out in q3 1995, 8 years ago.

Actually it is possible. Planning for renegade was in development shortly after the release of firestorm.

Just about anything they do, does.

I would try it, but I miss Command and Conquer.

Still impossible, what you just said actually makes it more impossible. Tiberian Sun: Firestorm came out in Q1 2000, around 3 and a half years ago. That would mean that, according to you, planning for Renegade started little over 3 years ago. Now how could it be possible for him to see pictures of Havoc/light tank/orca for Renegade in a magazine 7 years ago, if planning only started 3 years ago?

i had played it over @ a friends house and was like "WOW!" it was lie actually being there. unfortunatly, it aint true to the other c&c games, lack of attack organization (like no camander ect) but that aspect does 2 things, it both adds and takes away from the game. but hey, who cares, its fun to blow ppl up
